

Chieh Hsiao Chen (Jerry Chen)

- Medical degree: Kaohsiung Medical University
- Master Degree and PhD candidate: Institute of BioMedical Engineering, National Cheng Kung University
- Director, Department of Urology and Uro-oncology, China Medical University Beigang Hospital
- Visiting Scholar, Medical school of Stanford University
- Fellowship of Stanford- Taiwan Biomedical program
- Chief Medical Officer and Founder of iXensor Inc.

Dr. Chieh Hsiao Chen graduated from Kaohsiung Medical University in 2000 and finished the resident course and became the attending doctor in department of Urology in China Medical University Hospital. Now, Dr. Chen is the director of Urology in China Medical University Beigang Hospital. Besides medicine, Dr. Chen is also the expert in Biomedical engineering. Dr. Chen finished the master degree in Biomedical Engineering and became the PhD candidate in National Cheng Kung University. The studies include the biomedical signal processing, nanotechnologies and medical device development. In 2012, Dr. Chen was selected into the STB program and was sent to Stanford University to learn the startups in Silicon Valley. After coming back to Taiwan, Dr. Chen and the other two STB fellows startup the company, iXensor Inc.